African Americans & Africa

Kansas African Studies Center Fall Seminar Series

co-sponsored with Langston Hughes Center

How have African Americans viewed Africa? What has been the interaction of African Americans with the continent since emancipation in the United States? Are there any similarities to the way post-Emancipation America and colonial Africa reacted to the attempts of Africans and African Americans struggling for their social and political rights? This seminar series intends to investigate these questions and more through a series of lectures by Africanists and African Americanists from KU and throughout the country.
